Thank You SkyTime!

It's July! That means we will be blasted with sky pumped swag as soon as we are 'ready.' This year, Dane Jason, the CEO of SkyTime (A subsidiary of DoLC), a "fly high sky display-brand," has generously offered to extend our show style into the sky!

I will explain what I mean now: If you're not familiar with what SkyTime does, screw you! Just kidding. SkyTime displays visual interpretive firework displays high in the sky based on video content. The SkyTime software views any video content you give it and spits out a perfectly timed and "color correct" display based on that video. That is super bad ass. We were super pumped this year because Dane Jason was "pumped" to use US for FREE as part of a partnership which I won't go into the details of also. Thank you.

Dane will use his state of the art software to display an epic fourth of July firework display based on various clips collected from episodes of Skeleton Realm LIVE since 2022. For the July zine this month, the cover reveals an awesome photo taken at a testing event last week!

We had so much fun testing the SkyTime software and watching our display pump. We tested the software where the main event will occur at midnight on July 3rd and will extend to midnight July 5th, a hot lava area where volcanos continue to wreak havoc. We were almost burned by hot lava multiple times! OUCH!

Dane Jason, CEO SkyTime

For this fourth of July, I want to fully appreciate Dane Jason's tech and what he has contributed to our nation. It's not just the battle worn heros of days of yore AKA 1776 time which deserve our obsessive respect in 2024, it's also the modern heros like Dane who have have built and continue to build some of the coolest "systems" which use blasting, NOW.

Dane's blasting system got me thinking about how cool the "rampants hot glare" and the "bomb busting air" actually might have been in a days of yore battle that inspired the nation of which we enjoy the freedom to live in NOW.

So, in a big way, Dane Jason's company and tech is actually MORE of a reminder of my joy as an American than any soldier or hero (actually Dane is bigger heroically than soldiers in this way!)

Heroically speaking, we can celebrate those tech heroes that allow us to remember blown up bomb styles. I hope it's clear why this July will rock and not only on the fourth!

Good Work Boys. Now It's Time To Come Back Home

By Bigfoot

OOH OOH HOOH! Nah, I'm just kiddin!
I don't actually talk that way.

Gentlemen, let me begin by expressing my sincere appreciation for the excellent work you accomplished in your most recent tactical mission: killing Morph Williams. He was a blight, and he made everyone uncomfortable. There is no doubt, he deserved to meet his end in a bloom of flame, one which I observed under the covering of the beautiful Californian flora which I have called home for a number of years.

When word of your mission reached my neck of the woods, I decided right away that I would make the reasonably short trek from the otherworldly RedWoods of Santa Cruz down to Los Angeles, near the scourge, Morph Williams' compound. After all, you guys had to drive in from Atlanta.

I had made up my mind that I would not make my presence known to anyone involved in the thrill kill unless it was absolutely necessary.

It almost came to that point, but thanks to Big's tactical prowess, and the opportune dimensions of Teaseball, Morph Williams—along with his component—are ashes. No one is more pleased than I am that Morph Williams is gone forever—his scorched bones now a memento of a darker and soon to be forgotten world—but it's because I care, and because I love you boys that I urge you to proceed from this point onwards with reflection, and humility.

It would be impossible to not be gripped with a deep sense of satisfaction and pride in the act of absolutely demolishing Morph Williams' body in hellfire. I don't think anyone would expect you to abstain from celebrations of this momentous occasion, and I certainly think you should celebrate. Friends, there is a time and a place for all things, and right now it's friggin party time right here in the US friggin A.

A man's first thrill kill is not too unlike a junkie's first high, and indeed, a successful thrill kill is almost always followed by quite the head rush. Beware, just as a junkie must consume more and more of his substance of choice in order to "scratch the itch", a thrill killer must follow suit. Friends, this is and must be the end of your thrill killing days.

The killing of Morph Williams was a sanctioned event. If you thrill kill another being, I am certain you will be too far gone. Heed my warning boys. Mission accomplished. Now It's time to come back home.

I Went Back in Time and Was a Freaking KID AGAIN in Order to Review This Cooking Toy

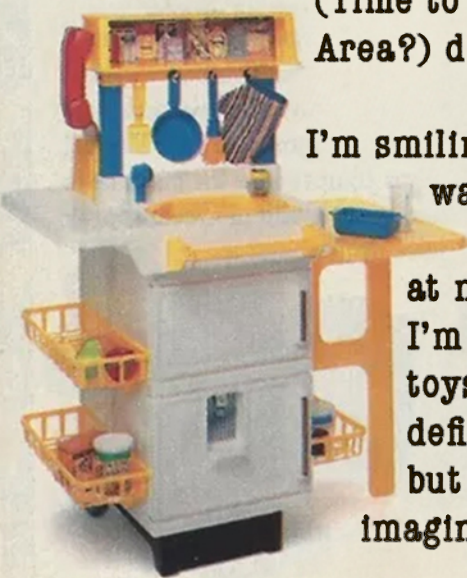

by Dan Levine

I guess I'm like 6? And this is my friend? Or sister? She is enjoying the hell out of this stupid thing ONG. It's kind of cool because it's a little complicated and substantial (in SIZE) but it just kind of reminds me of this kitchen island I had a few years ago that we put out on the curb. We posted it to this site where you say it's free and someone like jets over and takes it lol it's so wild. Like, there must be groups on that site that are trying to get their TtFTA (Time to Free Thing's Area?) down.

I'm smiling big as hell cause I want my friend to think

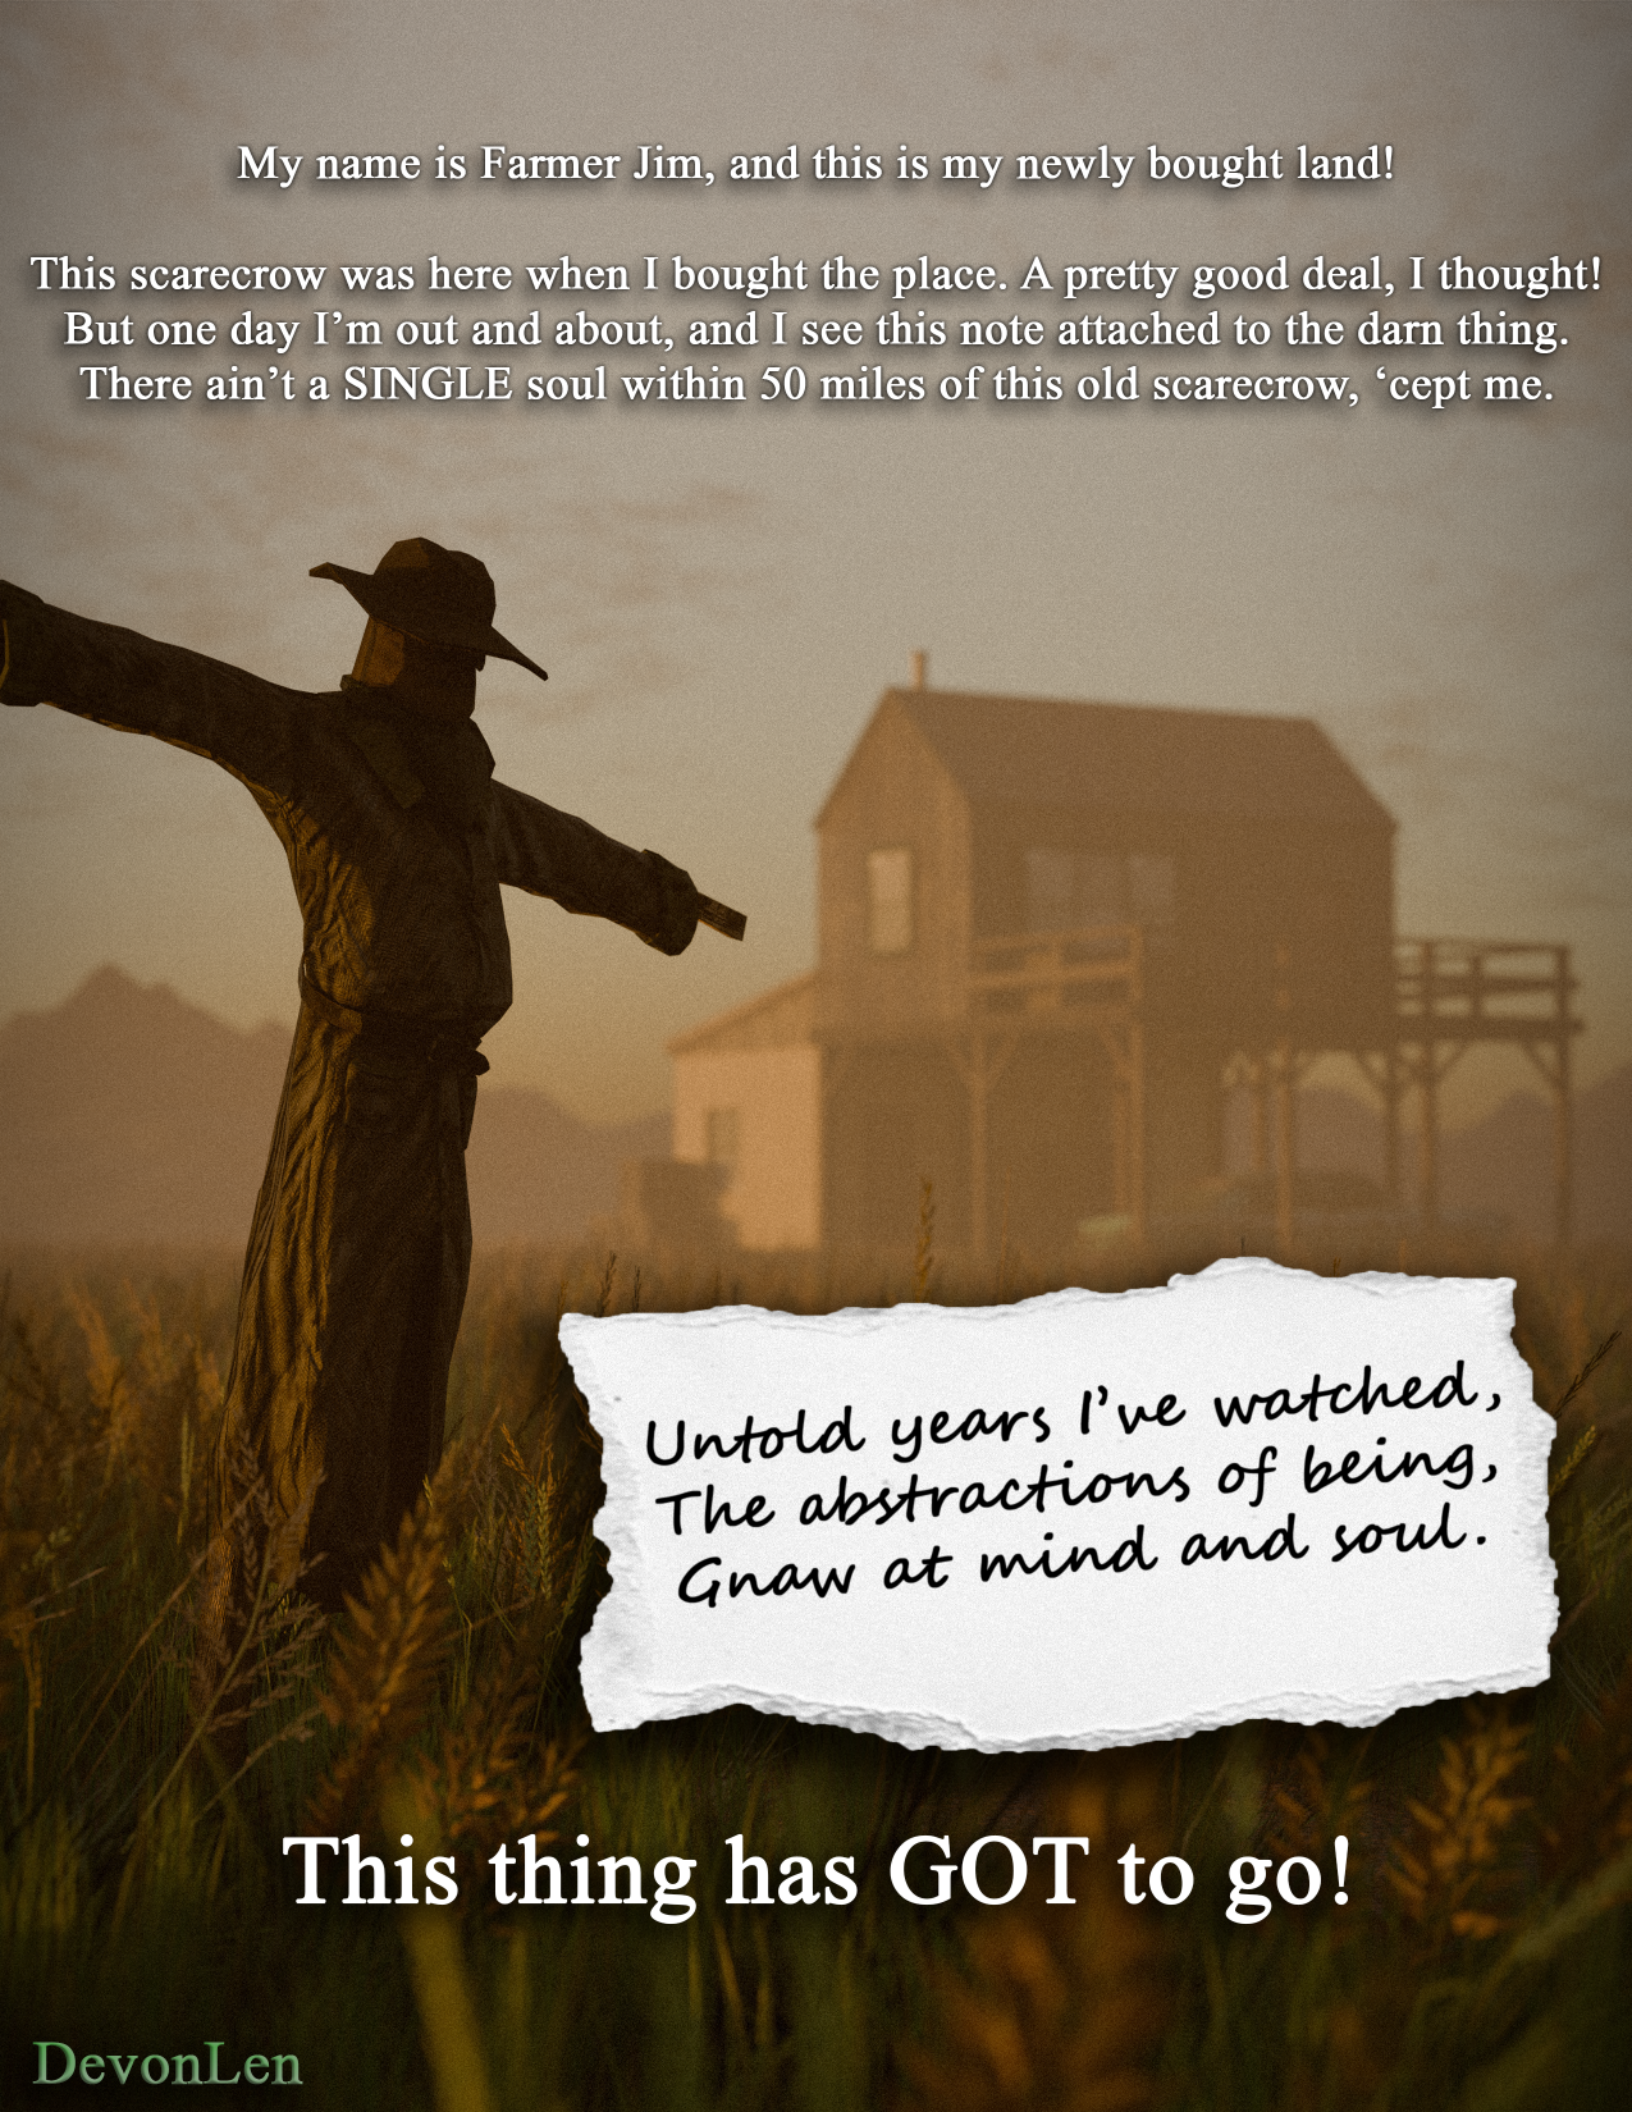

I'm 6. But honestly, I'm looking at myself and Gah DAMN I am swagged TF out, maybe I'm just smilin' big as hell cause of that lmao. As far as toys go, this one is kinda lame cause it's definitely a girl's toy (no guns, no animals) but I could for sure let my little imagination run wild with this thing!

My name is Farmer Jim, and this is my newly bought land!

This scarecrow was here when I bought the place. A pretty good deal, I thought!
But one day I'm out and about, and I see this note attached to the darn thing.
There ain't a SINGLE soul within 50 miles of this old scarecrow, 'cept me.

A scarecrow stands in a field of tall grass, its arms outstretched. In the background, a large wooden barn is visible under a hazy, golden sky. A piece of white, torn paper is attached to the scarecrow's chest.

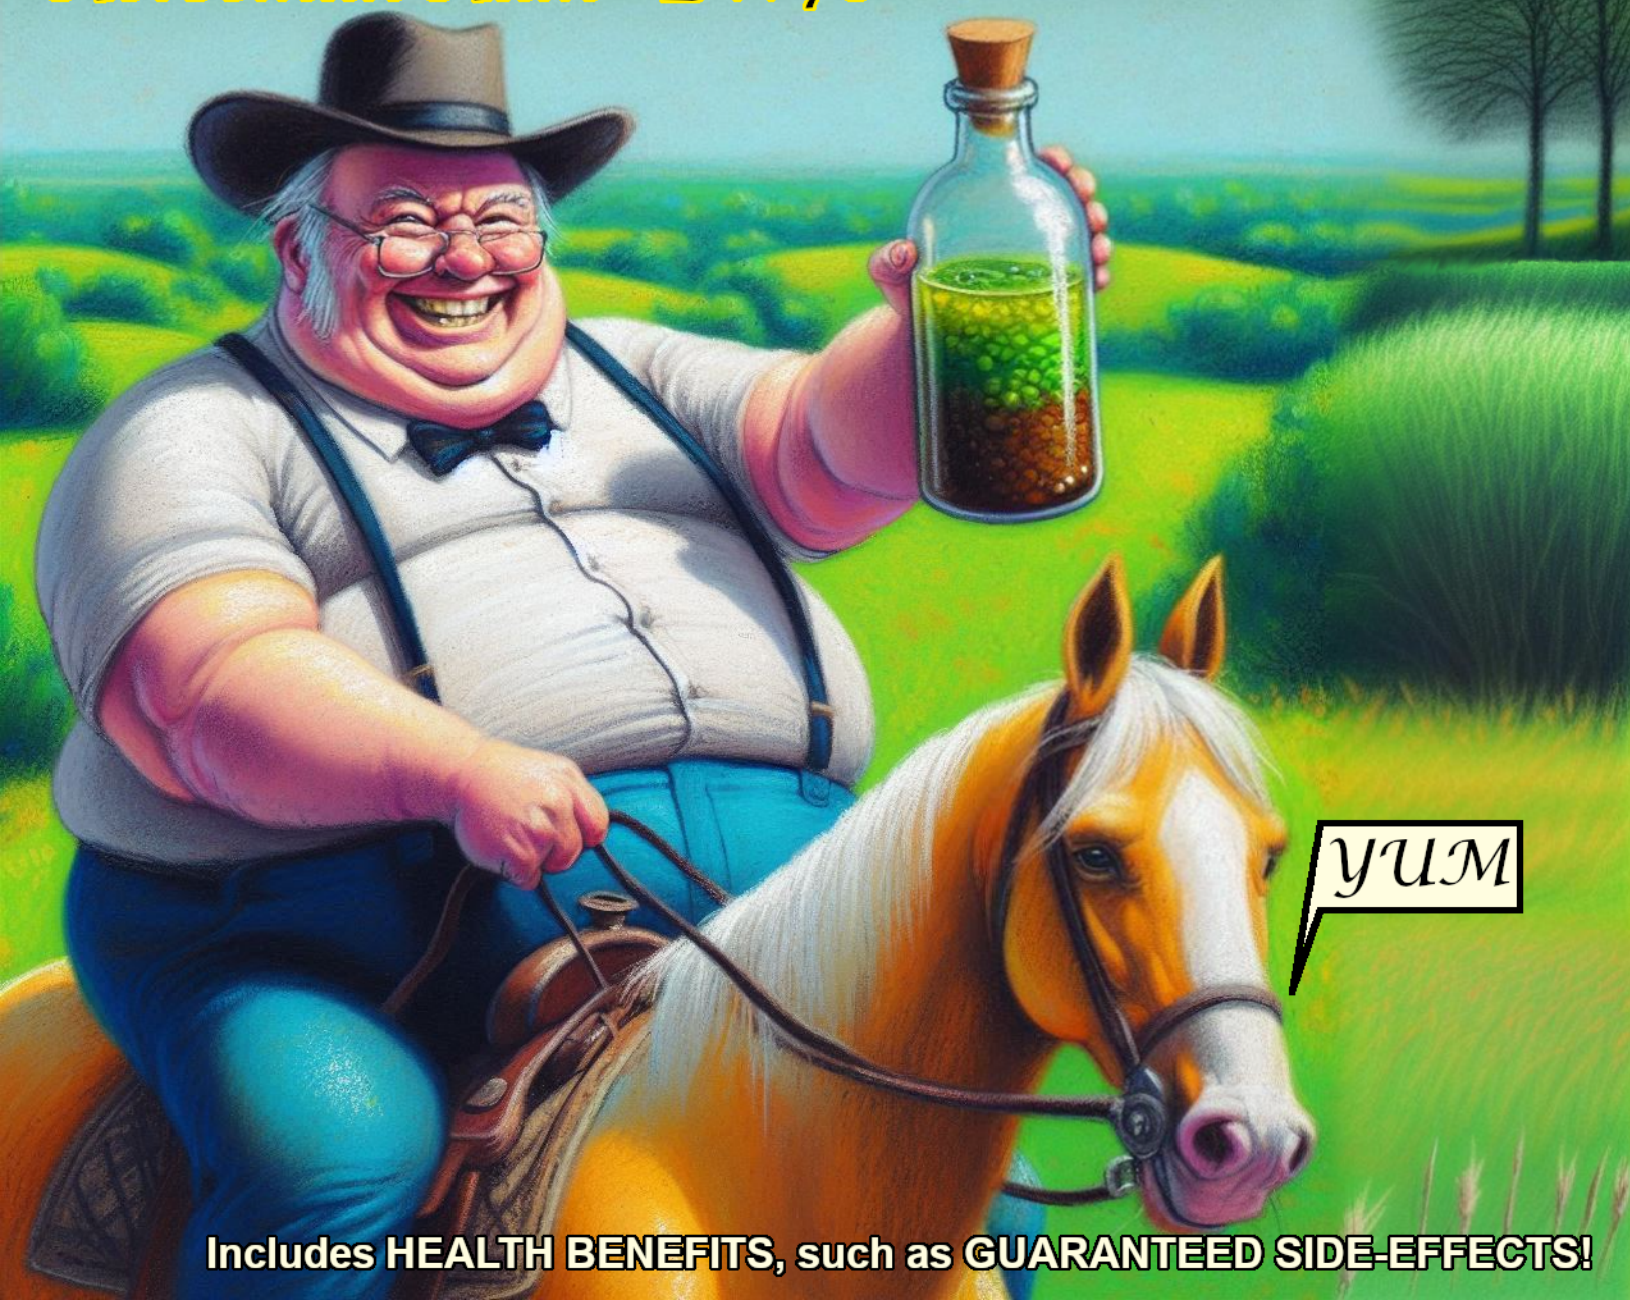

Untold years I've watched,
The abstractions of being,
Gnaw at mind and soul.

This thing has GOT to go!
